

Top Content

Notes & definitions

- Slug is the URL path with the leading slash, query string, and `/es/` locale prefix removed. Example: `https://mybrainguide.org/es/mantener-la-saludo-cerebral-1/` → `mantener-la-saludo-cerebral-1`.
- Canonical title and category come from `seeds/content_page_map.csv`. Edit that file (or paste in an updated CSV) to reclassify pages, add new ones, or mark old URLs as inactive (`is_active = false`, `superseded_by = new-slug`).
- Journey pages: any slug beginning with `journey/` is automatically classified as Journey by the mart model — no seed entry needed for sub-pages.
- URL changes over time: keep the old slug row with `is_active = false` so historical traffic is still categorized. Add a new row for the new slug.

- en_slug is used to roll up English and Spanish versions of the same page. Spanish pages have `locale = es` and `en_slug` pointing to their English counterpart.
- Unmapped pages are pages seen in GA4 but not yet in the seed. Their category shows as `Unmapped`. Check the Unmapped table below to find new or renamed pages to add.
- Source: `usa2-brainguide.reporting.mart_top_content` (dbt), refreshed daily.
- Pre-May 17 2026 counts are GA4 Data API estimates. In that historical window each metric was aggregated independently by the API, so on a small number of low-volume rows sessions can slightly exceed pageviews (an API artifact, ~1 session/row); from May 17 2026 the raw event export is internally consistent (pageviews ≥ sessions ≥ users).
